A pillar in the “Mile High City” for more than a century, Lewis Roca’s Denver office is one of the most reputable and respected legal providers in the region. With a diversified economy being one of Denver’s greatest strengths, we counsel some of the most notable businesses throughout the city’s top industries – financial services, telecommunications, information technology, aerospace and defense, manufacturing, and energy. With a rich history of excellence in banking, litigation, corporate transactions, tax, labor and employment, data protection and cybersecurity, and environmental and regulatory issues, our lawyers continue to foster new and inventive ways to deliver counsel that prioritizes the execution of our clients’ business strategies above all else.

Understanding our role as a leader in the Denver legal community, we actively encourage our lawyers and staff to become community service leaders, with active involvement in many area nonprofits, civic groups, pro bono programs, and educational institutions.
