With deep roots in “The Old Pueblo,” Lewis Roca’s Tucson office is one of the leading business law firms in southern Arizona. Providing counsel to companies and individuals across a variety of industries, including real estate, health care, and aerospace and defense, our lawyers possess the local and national subject-matter knowledge and relationships to contribute innovative, cost-effective legal guidance. Well-known and respected, our real estate, corporate, intellectual property, and litigation practices have successfully collaborated with businesses in the Tucson community for decades, providing instrumental counsel that has helped shape the city’s legal landscape to this day.

Recognizing our role as a legal community leader, we actively encourage our lawyers and staff to act as community service leaders by engaging with nonprofit organizations and pro bono programs that enrich the lives of people in the Tucson area. Lawyers in our office maintain an active pro bono practice that includes participation in the Volunteer Lawyers Program’s clinics and the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals’ Pro Bono Project, as well as specialized projects such as the Fresh Start For Women Foundation.
