Engaged in a business community that has seen substantial growth within the aerospace and defense, information security, and manufacturing industries in the last decade, Lewis Roca's Colorado Springs office has become one of the largest, most reputable firms in the city. We represent a variety of clients throughout these sectors, including some of the city's largest businesses, religious institutions, and nonprofit corporations operating in Colorado Springs, nationally and internationally. Our lawyers provide strategic, out-of-the-box legal guidance in the areas of government contracts, tax, litigation, labor and employment, and intellectual property.

Colorado Springs' long tradition of a community-first approach continues to inspire our own commitment to public and civic engagement in the region. Partnering with local charitable and nonprofit organizations, as well as pro bono programs and services, remains an important focal point for both our lawyers and staff throughout the year.
